

SUZANNE ADLER

Suzanne focuses her practice on business litigation, natural resources litigation, and employment law. She has successfully litigated issues of natural resources standing to the Alaska Supreme Court and has worked on a variety of real property, contract, and construction disputes. Suzanne is experienced in representing businesses and employees and has defended clients before a wide range of administrative matters, including the revocation of professional and medical licensure. She has successfully prosecuted and defended actions in federal court and at arbitration.

In addition to litigation, Suzanne represents businesses and individuals in real estate transactions involving the purchase and sale, lease, and management of commercial and residential properties. She represents businesses in performing the duties typically assigned to a general counsel, such as the drafting of employment contracts, hiring and termination of employees, and the management of state investigations into an employer's business practices.

Before joining LBB, Suzanne spent over five years working for an Alaskan law firm, clerked for the Honorable Bethany S. Harbison, Presiding Judge of the Fourth Judicial District in Fairbanks in 2017 and 2018, and for the Honorable Louis J. Menendez in Juneau, Alaska in 2016 and 2017.
