About

Joseph Levesque represents Alaskan municipalities and private clients throughout the state. He believes in a simple philosophy that clients from every sector have the right to successful, competent, and effective legal services, and that the quality of those services should never differ according to the client’s size or standing within a community.

Having lived and represented parties in some of Alaska’s largest, smallest, and most remote communities, Joseph understands that the needs of his clients differ in as many ways as Alaska’s people. He is dedicated to ensuring that each of his clients’ particular interests guide the scope of their representation.

Joseph began his legal career working in civil practice. He clerked for United States Magistrate Judge John D. Roberts for the District of Alaska then as a prosecutor for the Alaska District Attorney’s office in Kenai. Joseph then became Borough Attorney at the North Slope Borough before shifting his practice to serve multiple municipal and private clients.

Joseph is very involved in the Alaskan legal community and is a member of the Alaska Municipal Attorneys, Committee of the Alaska Bar Association Fee Arbitration/Mediation Committee, and Elmendorf Restoration Advisory Board.
